JUMPED FROM HIGH BRIDGE.

A Man Was Seen to Make the Leap and Mr. Openhym's Hat and Umbrella Were Found on the Footpath.

The family of Adolphe Openhym have covery of his body. Although boatmen have dragged every foot of the river near High Bridge, from which he is supposed to have leaped to his death, not trace of the missing man has been found. Early this morning the search was resumed and the river was crowded with men anxious to gain the reward. Fifty men have been hired by Mr. Openhym's relatives. They are supplied with every convenience to aid them in their search. In addition to being paid regularly for their work, the man who bonus. But these searchers were almost unnoticed in the maze of boat owners who dropped their grappling-hooks into the river.

As the hours go by without the body being found the relatives of the missing man try to persuade themselves that it was not Adolphe Openhym who was seen to leap from High ridge on Monday. In a statement given out by them they say that they have utterly falled to find any reason why he should become a suicide Home Life Happy.

The business affairs of William Openstatement made by other members of the firm. Mr. Openhym's private life in his home was most happy, it is declared, and he had not been suffering from ill health.

A thorough search of his papers has en made, but the relatives says he been made, but the least of explanation. Temporary insanity is the only theory hey can advance and yet they declare was of such a cheery disposition that h an idea is hard to entertain.

Think There is No Doubt. Inspector McClusky said to-day that he knew nothing of the case and had not inquired why the report had not come directly to headquarters. He said from what he heard of the card of the firm being found in Mr. Openhym's hat there could be no doubt as to the identity.

hat there could be no doubt as to the identity.

Mr. Hirsh, the legal representative of the firm, said he thought Mr. Openhym might have fallen from the bridge by accident. As the hat and umbrella were said carefully on the bridge and the railing is very high this theory is not bonsidered by the police.

Besides, the bridge tender testifies postively that he saw the man crawl up an the railing and leap into the water.

Mr. Openhym was the head of one of the largest silk importing houses in the city. The firm occupies the big building at No. 35 Mercer street. His individual fortune is estimated at $1,000,000 and his home is one of the finest in Riverside Drive. He was a member of many prominent clubs, of the Chamber of Commerce and a generous subscriber to all works of charity in church and educational work.

According to an Italian, who has a Thirty-fourth street, early yesterday grove a gasoline automobile of the run-about type from the Thirty-fourth street ferry-house and stopped in front of his stand. Both jumped out and one of the men, handing him a 10-cent piece, asked him to look after the machine until they returned. The Italian wait-ed all day for their return and then called Policeman Browing of the East Thirty-fifth street station.

As Browing was examining the auto rough-looking man came up and told machine away. The policeman told the man if he could run it to get in with him and drive it to the station-house. The man-consented, but when he arrived there he jumped out and disappeared. Upon examining the automobile the police found "J. C. Parish, Metropolitan Club," written under the
